PREFACE.

Having become an inhabitant of New-Jersey, it occurred to me, that I should perform a service, which would be acceptable to the community by employing my leisure in compiling a NEW-JERSEY REGISTER, on the plan of those, annually, issued in the eastern states. This is the first thing of the kind, as I have been informed, which has been attempted in this part of our country. The candid will, therefore, make allowances for any imperfections, which may be noticed; as they may rest assured, that every reasonable exertion will be made, to render the future editions of this REGISTER more perfect, interesting, and worthy of their patronage.

The hon. Elias Boudinot, his excellency, gov. Bloomfield, mr. sec. Linn, Aaron D. Woodruff, esq. atty. gen. James J. Wilson, esq. adjutant gen. col. Jonathan Rhea, James Ewing, esq. rev. doc. Ira Condict, mr. John Shotwell, mr. Henry Shotwell, rev. Samuel Fisher, rev. John Mac Dowell, Samuel Whitaker, esq. Thomss T. Kinney, esq. surrogate, Abraham Bradley, esq. assistant post master general, and other gentlemen, for their kindly aid, in furnishing documents for this publication, will please to accept the respectful acknowledgments of their humble servant,

TIMOTHY ALDEN.

Newark, N. J. 27 Dec. 1810.

MEDICAL SOCIETY OF NEW-JERSEY.

No person can be elected a member of this society, unless he have been a regular practitioner within the state for one year, and can produce ample testimonials as well, of his moral character, as of his professional acquirements, from, at least, two members of the board. Every candidate for admission must submit to such examination as the society may think proper. The society has power to elect honorary members, the proportion of which is never to exceed, in number, a quarter of the number of the other members of the institution.

From the rules and regulations of this society, which were published in 1809, it appears, that the members consider themselves as bound to act upon the principles honour, in all their proceedings, to cultivate friendship with one another, and to promote the interest and improvement of the science of medicine, and that they will, on all occasions, do all in their power to discountenance irregular pretenders to a knowledge of medicine, and that "they will not, under any circumstances, consult or hold any professional intercourse with them."

The medical society of New-Jersey is divided into two district societies, termed eastern and western societies, which are governed by the laws of the general society. The eastern district is composed of the counties of Bergen, Essex, Morris, Middlesex, Somerset, and Sussex; and the western, of those of Hunterdon, Burlington, Monmouth, Gloucester, Salem, Cumberland, and Cape May. The district societies elect their own officers and keep minutes of their proceedings, which they communicate to the general society, at every annual meeting, and this is holden on the second tuesday of June, at such place as the society may direct.

COLLEGES.

PRINCETON COLLEGE.

The charter of a college, in New-Jersey, was granted, about the year 1738, and was enlarged in 1747. The institution was, at first, fixed at Elizabeth, and went into operation, in 1747, under the presidency of the rev. Jonathan Dickinson. He departed this life in the following year, and it was removed to Newark, where, being committed to the care of the rev. Aaron Burr, it continued till 1756. It was then permanently established at Princeton. The college was called Nassau Hall, by governour Belcher, its great patron, in honour of the PRINCE OF ORANGE.

This institution has been favoured with a succession of presidents, distinguished for their piety and literary acquirements; and many of its alumni have attained the highest rank, in various departments, among the eminent characters of the American states.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, NEW-BRUNSWICK.

“The charter for this college was obtained, in the year 1770. The men, who devised the plan, who solicited and obtained the royal grant, under the government, which then prevailed, were pious and distinguished ministers of the reformed Dutch Church.”

The late rev. doc. Hardenbergh was called to the presidency of Queen's College, about the year 1783.

A large and elegant brick edifice, for the use of this institution, has recently been erected, in a pleasant and commanding part of the city of New-Brunswick, and will shortly be completed.

For the history of this, now promising seminary, the writer begs leave to refer to a lucid and interesting address, delivered by its learned president, at the last anniversary commencement.

ACADEMIES AND SCHOOLS.

It was the writer's intention to have given an account of all incorporated academies, and of the most noted schools, throughout the state. He regrets that he has not been more successful in obtaining documents for the purpose. Future editions of this work, it is expected, will be less exceptionable in this and in several other particulars.

NEWARK ACADEMY.

A Latin grammar school had been kept, for many years, in Newark. A sightly and commodious stone edifice was built before the revolutionary war, on the Upper Common, for an academy, which was wantonly burnt by a party of the British troops. No effectual attempts, however, were made for establishing a corporate academick institution, in this ancient town, till about the beginning of the year, 1792.

At this time, divers respectable gentlemen voluntarily associated for the purpose of forming such an institution in Newark, and chose Isaac Gouverneur, esq. president of the board. They soon agreed on the plan to be pursued, bought a lot of land in an eligible situation, and erected a building for the academy.

It is a handsome brick edifice, fronting upon Broad Street, with the end upon Academy Lane, sixty-six feet by thirty four, on the ground, and three stories high, with a seven feet stone basement. It is divided into a competent number of apartments, finished in a plain style, and was originally designed for the use of young masters only.

At a meeting of the associates, 29 April,

1795, pursuant to a law of New-Jersey, entitled "an act to incorporate societies for the promotion of learning," the following gentlemen were elected trustees of the academy; rev. doc. Alexander Macwhorter, rev. doc. Uzal Ogden, hon. William Peartree Smith, esq. hon. Elisha Boudinot, esq. col. Samuel Ogden, Abraham Ogden, esq. and gen. John Noble Cumming.

Since that period, at different times, as breaches have been made upon their number, by death or resignation, capt. John Burnet, mr. Samuel Baldwin, hon. Archibald Mercer, esq. rev. doc. Edward Dorr Griffin, rev. Joseph Willard, William Wallace, esq. and rev. James Richards have also been added.

Doctor Macwhorter was the first president of the trustees, and continued in this office till his death, in 1808. He was succeeded in the presidency, 14 May, 1808, by hon. judge Boudinot, who resigned, 12 October, 1809, when rev. mr. Richards was elected to the office.

Doctor Ogden was secretary of this board, from the time of its incorporation, till May, 1808, when, having resigned, mr. Wallace was chosen his successor in office.

In 1802, rev. William Woodbridge took charge of this institution, and a female boarding school was added to it, under the patronage of the trustees. A spacious and convenient brick house, for the accommodation of the young ladies with the preceptor's family, was, soon after, erected adjoining the academy.

In August, 1809, mr. Woodbridge having previously stated his purpose to relinquish the complicated and laborious charge, it was thought expedient, for the more extensive benefit of the pupils, to make an entirely new arrangement. After due deliberation, it was concluded, that the young masters' department should, in future, be altogether separate from that of the young ladies, and that different instructors should have the superintendence of each.

Accordingly, rev. Samuel Whelpley was elected preceptor, and took charge of the young masters' department, in November 1809.

The author of this sketch was elected to the preceptorship of the young ladies' department, and entered on the business of instruction, 2 January, 1810.

Both sexes are taught in different apartments, under the same roof, yet they enter the academy on different streets, and all intercourse is precluded.

In the rooms, devoted to the use of the young gentlemen, all branches are taught, by able instructors, which are necessary in preparing for the counting-house, or for admission into college.

In the young ladies' apartments, all branches, useful and ornamental, are taught, by various instructors, which are deemed important at any similar institution in the United States ; but, with what ability and success, it may not be so becoming, in the writer, to state. His appeal must be to the publick and to the parents and guardians of the young ladies, whose education he has the happiness to superintend and to direct.

There are two vacations, in a year, at this institution, of three weeks each, from 9 April, to the 1 of May, and from the 9 of October to the 1 of November.

The first trustees under this agreement were chosen, on the 10 of February, 1781, and were Stacey Potts, Moore Furman, James Ewing, Isaac Collins, and William Churchill Houston.

On the 11 of February, 1782, the building was so far completed as to be fit to receive the schools, which consisted of about fifty scholars under the care of George Merchant, as superintendent, assisted by James Burnside, as English teacher.

On the 2 of March, 1783, the company finding their house too small to accommodate their scholars, agreed to extend their number of shares so as to enable them to build two additional rooms of the same size as the former. This was accordingly done and the company now consists of forty nine shares and the building is forty six feet long by twenty feet deep, containing two rooms on each floor with an entry through the centre.

In March, 1785, a subscription was opened for establishing a fund for the support of the teachers, and other purposes. This, after passing through several revolutions, at present, consists of only twelve shares each of which entitles the proprietors to send to any of the schools in the academy, scholars to the amount of three dollars and fifty nine cents in each quarter, free of tuition. This has been the foundation of a fund, which with the assistance of a few donations, now yields a handsome revenue.

In November, 1785, a charter of incorporation was obtained by the name of "The Trustees of the Trenton Academy."

The trustees having found some inconvenience in having youth of both sexes educated in the same house, on the 1st of April, 1800, entered into an agreement with the trustees of the presbyterian church, by which they procured an old school house belonging to them. This they have fitted up, raising another story upon it, and into it they have removed the young ladies, by which means they are kept entirely separate from the other schools, though the whole institution is under the same superintendent and trustees.

Chaponean society

at Perth Amboy, consists of a number of young ladies, who have associated together for literary, moral, and religious improvement. This name has been assumed in honour of the late excellent mrs. Chapone of Great Britain. What a beautiful example is this, for the young ladies in every city, town, and village in New-Jersey to follow ! In the next edition of this Register, the author hopes for the pleasure of inserting an account of many such highly meritorious institutions.

Perth Amboy library

The New-Brunswick humane society

“ For the purpose of giving relief to such needy and distressed poor of the city, as cannot regularly claim, or whose circumstances do not authorize their receiving, support from the public provisions of the town ; to afford aid to strangers, providentially cast among us, in distressed circumstances ; to give succour, in certain cases, to prisoners confined for debt, to educate the children of such poor families, as are not able to furnish to their children the means of instruction ; a number of the citizens of New-Brunswick, three years ago, formed themselves into a society, by the name of the New-Brunswick Humane Society, adopted a constitution, and established rules for regulating the proceedings of the society.

“ Every member of the society subscribes and pays a certain sum annually into the funds of the society. Donations to the funds are made by numbers, who do not subscribe as members. The society meets, on the first monday, in November, when they elect their officers for the ensuing year, and receive a report, from the board of directors, of their proceedings and success during the past year."

No doubt there are other mistakes, especially in the spelling of proper names.

The author will thank any one to point out any inaccuracies, which may be noticed, before the close of the year, 1811, that corrections may be made in the next edition. He will also be obliged to any, who will take the trouble, to furnish him with documents for supplying the deficiencies of this first edition of the Register ; particularly, with an account of all social libraries, specifying the number of volumes in each, the date of such institutions and the officers of the same ; with an account of all academies and noted schools omitted with the names of the officers and instructors of each ; and, in general, with an account of all corporate bodies, their object, the names of the officers, and founders of the same.

A list of the turnpike corporations and the several district abolition societies would have been given, in this publication, could an account, of all such in the state, with the names of the respective officers of each, have been obtained in season for an insertion in the proper place.

CIRCULAR LETTER,

RESPECTFULLY ADDRESSED TO EVERY GENTLEMAN OF SCIENCE IN THE STATE OF N. JERSEY.

SIR, Newark, 1 January, 1811.

Since Divine Providence has cast my lot in this pleasant and flourishing part of our country, I have been led to contemplate writing a history of the state of New-Jersey. Having a fondness for historical researches ; and having received some kindly suggestions on the subject of such an undertaking, from several friends of high respectability ; and supposing that, by entering on such a task, no interference with the literary purposes of any other gentleman, in the state, would be occasioned ; I have commenced the labour of collecting documents, and of availing myself in various ways, of the complex information, necessary for carrying the object into effect.

Confiding in the readiness of the intelligent gentlemen of this state to aid in furnishing documents for the contemplated history of New-Jersey, I beg leave to take this method to communicate a few articles, upon which their assistance, as opportunity may offer, is respectfully solicited.

1. The dates of the settlement and incorporation of every county, township, and city in the state ; the aboriginal names of places with an interpretation of the same, so far as can be ascertained, as there was generally, perhaps invariably, an appropriate meaning, which ought to be preserved ; the names of the first settlers of every place and the countries, whence they originated ; the extent of the ancient townships and the times when others were formed from them ; a topographical description of every place, descending into a variety of particulars as to soil, productions, manufactures, improvements, style of building, natural and artificial curiosities, mountains, rivers, cascades, ponds, springs, animals, caverns, minerals, stones, fossils, pigments, medical and poisonous substances, their uses and antidotes ; the former and present state of cultivation, with suggestions on further improvements in agriculture, roads, and canals, etc. 2. An account of the sufferings of the inhabitants, during the revolutionary war, with anecdotes of the exploits and prowess of individuals, and details of skirmishes, between the contending armies, not noticed in any publication. 3. The time of forming churches of every denomination with the names of those, who first composed them; the names of the ministers, specifying whence they originated, where they were educated, when they were settled, when they died or were removed, their age, and biographical notices of each with a list of their publications; an account of the state of religion, at different periods, and of revivals of religion, given in such a detail as to afford satisfaction and encouragement to the lovers of the Redeemer. 4. Biographical notices of all such persons as have been remarkable for usefulness in life; for ingenuity, enterprise, literature, or any other valuable accomplishment. 5. Monuments and relics of the aborigines with traditional anecdotes relative to any, who formerly lived in New-Jersey. 6. Observations on the weather, diseases, and the influence of the climate, or of particular situations, employments and aliments, and especially on the effect of spirituous liquors on the human constitution. 7. Bills of mortality specifying ages and casualties, the proportion of births and deaths, and the increase or decrease of population in particular places. 8. Account of manufactures and fisheries and suggestions on further improvement in them. 9. Modes of education, what encouragement given to literary establishments; where there are social libraries, when founded and the number of books they contain. 10. An account of all remarkable events, which have befallen any place, family, or individual. 11. Interesting epitaphs and inscriptions. 12. An account of all publications from the first settlement of the state, the authors of which were natives of this state or residents in it, a copy of which is earnestly requested, either, gratuitously, at a fair price, or on loan, whenever the use of such can aid in writing the intended history of N. Jersey. For the same purpose the use of ancient manuscripts, which may be advantageous, are also solicited.

I am, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

TIMOTHY ALDEN.
