No. 1.

THE SEMINARY AND THE WAR.

BY THE REV. PROFESSOR WALTER W. MOORE, D. D., LL. D., Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.

Union Seminary has an illustrious record of patriotic service in times of war. Its students responded to the call of their country in 1861. It is one of the cherished distinctions of the institution that it emptied its halls into that immortal army which was always outnumbered but never outfought, and that its students took part in that tremendous struggle in which the North won the victory and the South in so great a measure won the glory. A number of these students laid down their lives in that conflict, the first three to fall being the Rev. Dabney Carr Harrison, chaplain, killed at Fort Donelson; Edgar Wirt Carrington, killed at Seven Pines, and Captain Hugh A. White, killed at Second Manassas—all in 1862. About seventy others served as chaplains or soldiers in the ranks. One of the most distinguished of these, still with us, a universally honored and beloved citizen of Richmond, is the Rev. James P. Smith, D. D., captain and aide de camp to Stonewall Jackson, and for nearly fifty years past stated clerk of the Synod of Virginia. One of the professors in the Seminary, Dr. Robert L. Dabney, was General Jackson's chief of staff, and subsequently his biographer.

The Seminary, therefore, is simply showing itself true to type in sending so many of its sons into the great army which in our day is going forth to battle for the saving of Christian civilization, and the vindication of righteousness, and the protection of the weak, and the establishment of freedom, and, as we hope, the ending of all wars. More than a hundred of the students and recent graduates of the Seminary have offered themselves for various lines of service in connection with the world war—some as captains and lieutenants or privates in the ranks, some as aviators, some as engineers, some as members of ambulance corps, some as chaplains, some as Y. M. C. A. workers and some as camp pastors. No doubt the following list is incomplete, though it contains all the names that have been sent to us, and we shall be grateful to any readers who will send us additional names and data, but the list as it stands is an impressive exhibit of the service which the institution is rendering to the country in the present crisis. The figures in parenthesis after the names indicate the year of graduation. The letters A. E. F. stand for American Expeditionary Force.
